I. INTRODUCTION

People want comfort so they want organization to be productive.
Some forms of organizations have imposed themselves more or less but with results not very good.
Most universities are not very good.
Most administrations are not very good.
Most elections are not very honest with some people excluded.

We were in an Age of forms of organizations originated in the Western World spreading across the world.
In some companies, methods of work are considered confidential, because of the competition.

II. MAIN TEXT

Forms of organizations are different from one country to another but not very different.
Important changes should come from the degree of use of internet.
Inheritors of forms of organizations do not make important changes.

A problem is that people are raised being told that creativity is not necessary.
In some companies, people think that internal audit is needed only when obvious mistakes occur and not for assessing performances.
Forms of organizations can be rather empty envelopes.

III. CONCLUSION

Any forms of organizations do not guarantee that people perform some good research (some good research is needed).
Callings are needed for good research, which means good education.

Research is necessary because present knowledge is not enough knowledge for solving some present problems.
In the long term, it is quite probable that some people will fulfill the need for good research.
People can be gifted for doing research and not good for secretary work.
Internal audit must assess forms of organizations.
